

Women 50:50 is the campaign to create a better Scotland by ensuring that we have fair representation in our parliament, our councils and our public bodies.

Despite some progress, the governance of our country - in our council chambers, on public boards, and in our parliament - is still dominated by men. We have only 34% women in Parliament and less than 25% in our councils. We believe the only way to achieve a balance in public life, so that our elected representatives reflect our society as it is, is through legal quotas.

What we are campaigning for:

1. To devolve the powers to the Scottish Parliament for legal quotas
2. Parties to put forward 50% women candidates in the 2016 election
3. For a legal requirement for 50% quotas by 2020 in the Scottish Parliament, in councils and on public boards

Join us today to campaign for equality, to build a Scotland that belongs to all of us.
